

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1872.

A very large and most enthusiastic public meeting was held in New York on Thursday night, in Union Square, to ratify the Democratic and Liberal Republican nominees for State officers. Able speeches were made by Francis Kernan, the candidate for Governor; by Chauncey M. Depew, the Liberal Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor; Hon. S. S. Cox, Hon. R. M. T. Hunter, of Virginia, General Banks, Robert C. Walker, Fernando Wood, A. J. Requier, of South Carolina, and others. So large was the crowd that seven separate stands were erected and the people addressed from each. The two ablest speeches of the evening were made by Mr. Kernan and the Hon. R. M. T. Hunter, of Virginia. Mr. Kernan devoted his speech principally to a consideration of national issues and arraigned the present Administration in severe terms. The speech of Mr. Hunter was a fair and dispassionate review of the present condition of the South. He paid the following deserved tribute to the honorable surrender of the South, at the close of the war. He said: "I believe that there never has been a people conquered who, after such a contest, accepted their condition with a more thorough appreciation of all its legitimate consequences, or with a more sincere intent to discharge honestly all the obligations which it imposed upon them." The New York Tribune gives, editorially, a synopsis of the reasons why, according to Mr. Hunter, the South joins issue with the Republican party. The South, said Mr. Hunter, supports Greeley and Brown, "First, to effect a genuine and cordial union between the North and South; 2d, to bring about a feeling of confidence between the white and black races which have been kept too long apart; 3d, to counteract the present threatening tendency to centralization of power; 4th, to place an honest man in the Presidency who will not use his vast power and influence over office-holders for selfish or arbitrary ends." In its editorial of the demonstration, the Herald says, "it was evident that the masses had poured out resolved to support the ticket, an democrat and liberal were hailed heartily alike, and to the vast concourse of citizens, who, in their tens of thousands listened to the speakers around the stands in Union square or in Irving or Tammany Hall, the conviction must have settled upon them that the issue for November lay between two parties and two only—the party supporting General Grant and the party supporting Horace Greeley."

The other day, in Chicago, a prisoner was tried and convicted of murder in twenty minutes. This was quick work. The cause of this unwonted expedition is to be found in the terror produced by the murder mania that prevails in that city. The community has been greatly excited over the unusual number of murders recently committed. The case thus summarily disposed of was a peculiarly aggravated one, the murderer having maliciously shot a policeman in the performance of his duty. The state of the public mind is such that the State Attorney has deemed it expedient to make a publication reciting the law and detailing the efforts of the Courts to protect life and limb. There would be fewer murders and fewer crimes of all kinds if summary justice was more generally dealt out to offenders.

A Frenchman, M. Delsoi, is to follow in the track of Dr. Livingstone. He goes to Africa at his own expense, and will make a thorough exploration of the interior. We hope at least that he will save his friends some anxiety by being considerate enough not to get lost. But if he insists upon imitating Livingstone in this also, there is one thing more that we most respectfully ask of him, and that is, not to allow himself to be found by an enterprising reporter. From the specimen that we have lately had of a discovery of this kind, we leave our readers to imagine the suffering to which the public would be subjected.

There was a large and enthusiastic Democratic and Conservative meeting at Monument square, in Baltimore, last night, which in character and numbers was striking and significant of the depth of feeling in the political issues. Ex-Gov. Swann presided. The opening speech was by J. Worth Spates, who was followed by Ex-Gov. Swann, J. C. Moore, of Washington, Hon. John Ritchie, of Frederick; Dr. James C. Hill, of Alexandria; C. P. Culver, of Washington, and James M. Buchanan, Jr., of Baltimore. All the speakers were well received and frequently applauded.

At a meeting of the council of Harrisonburg on Thursday it was ordered that an election be held in that place on the 12th of October, to take the sense of the voters upon the subject of appropriating $25,000 to the Washington, Cincinnati and St. Louis Narrow Gauge railroad, the same to commence within the corporate limits of the town, and to be commenced and completed to or near the town of Bridge-water within twelve months. The bonds of the town to be taken at par by the railroad company, to run for twenty years, and to bear 7 per cent. interest.

Fayette McMullan is out in a card saying he was "tricked" out of the nomination for Congress in the Wythe district, but can't run against Bowen, who got it, because he promised him, when his nomination looked improbable, not to run against him if he got it. He hints at another "mass meeting" to review the whole work and give him a chance.

We see that Miss Kellogg, the great American songstress, has rejected the suit of a Russian nobleman.

The Petersburg Progress is opposed to running a Conservative for Congress in that district, where there are four Radical candidates in the field, and says:—"Rather than a Conservative should go to Congress from this district, the field will be cleared by Radical money and the Conservative candidate will find himself in the usual position of being fronted by a single opponent and certain defeat staring him in the face." Which would probably be the case.

A letter has been produced written by Mr. John Quincy Adams on the 15th of November last earnestly commending the passive policy for Democrats and the adoption of Presidential candidates to be nominated by the Liberal Republicans. Now Mr. Adams rebels against the very policy he then commended and offers himself to run as a candidate for the Vice-Presidency, thereby contributing to the re-election of Grant.

The Lynchburg News warns those of the Democrats who refuse to support Greeley and Brown of the consequence of their course, and says:—"Should defeat in November be the result of the perverse course of a few thousand Democrats in the doubtful States, we may bid farewell to all hope of the early triumph of conservative principles in this Government. Radicalism will have full swing and be even more rampant than ever."

There is to be a grand Greeley and Brown mass meeting at Luray, Page county, on the 19th. Among the speakers announced are Governor Walker, and Messrs. Wm. Smith, John Letcher, Shelton F. Leake, John B. Baldwin, A. H. H. Stuart, Charles J. Faulkner, (of West Virginia), John T. Harris, James Fields, James Barbour, J. L. Kemper, R. E. Withers, and others. The Valley appears to be thoroughly aroused.

The Georgetown Courier well remarks that one of the sources of prosperity to a city is found in having a plenty of convenient and comfortable houses for the better class of laborers, and for men with salaries, or small fixed incomes. The wealth of a city is not indicated so much by its palaces, as by a multitude of small, neat, and home-like houses, in which a man of limited means may live and feel that it is a home.

The Hagerstown Md. Mail warns the people on the borders of Pennsylvania against the "colonization" of colored voters from Maryland and Virginia. It says:—"Within the last week or two, a large number of idlers who were to be seen at all hours hanging about our street corners, have disappeared; and, although never given to work, have suddenly found employment in Pennsylvania."

The total number of troops now stationed in the Southern States is 7,879, of which number 3,743 are in Texas on Indian and frontier service, 334 at Fortress Monroe, and 451 in Florida, mostly doing garrison duty at Fort Pickens, Key West, and the Dry Tortugas. The largest number in any one State is 1,056 in South Carolina, while the smallest number is in Arkansas, 63 being stationed there.

The Washington Chronicle designates the spiking of a cannon in this place a day or two ago, by some thoughtless person, "Ku Kluxing a cannon" and instances it as a specimen of "Virginia liberality" and attributes it to "uncomfortable emotions" on the part of Conservatives. &c. Bosh!

In the midst of the political war of words now raging over the land, it is refreshing to meet with one contemporary, the Raleigh, North Carolina Sentinel, calmly discussing its columns, day after day, the authorship of the letters of Junius.

Col. R. T. W. Duke, member of Congress from the old Albemarle district, has entered zealously upon the work of the campaign. He expresses his determination to remain in the field until the day of election.

A telegram from Washington states that the work of taking voters into Pennsylvania to aid in the election of Hartcraft in October has already begun.

The scarcity of water is getting to be a serious matter in the Valley. Many mills are now idle for the want of water, and others are working on short time.

Littell's Living Age, for this week, has its usual variety of interesting selections from the foreign reviews and magazines. Littell & Gay publishers, Boston.

Fine rains are reported in various parts of the State, from which good effects are anticipated.

FREAK OF LIGHTNING—MARVELLOUS ESCAPE.—Yesterday evening during the prevalence of the thunder storm a freak of a electricity occurred hardly paralleled in the annals of our city. While Mr. Crosby an operator in the Southern and Atlantic Telegraph Company, was engaged in calling Washington he was suddenly startled by two reports resembling those of a musket, and simultaneously the whole office appeared to be in a liquid sheet of flame. Thrown almost out of his chair, and his pen thrown from behind his ear several yards, he staggered to his feet. He was severely shocked, and for a moment believed the office on fire, but the experience of an old operator told him on second thought the status of affairs. The lightning had entered the window, melted and disconnected several of the wires.

There were several employees of the office and two or three citizens in and about the building at the time, and there was a general stampede. The Whig reporter happening to have sought shelter from the rain under the awning of the Mutual Insurance office at the time, was in conversation with Major John H. Clariborne, and witnessed the whole occurrence. Both were startled by the reports, and five or six vivid flashes, resembling the flashes of the explosion of gun powder, and which illumined the buildings on the opposite side of the street with a lurid glare. To rush to the telegraph office was the work of a moment, the first impression being fire. To our astonishment, there was no one in the office but Mr. Crosby, who, with moustache and hair badly singed and fingers severely burned, was nonchalantly engaged with a pair of pliers in connecting his wires. Three of the wires were entirely melted and several others badly damaged. The coolness of Mr. Crosby under the circumstances was noticed and applauded by more than one who was more afraid of electricity than he was of bullets. It is the opinion of Mr. Crosby that he had received the full force of the shock he would have undoubtedly been killed.—Richmond Whig.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

"To show the very age and body of the Times"

Philip Clinglin Smith, at one time Mormon Bishop of Cedar City, Utah, deposes that he was at the Mountain Meadow Massacre; that the fight between the Mormon assailants and the ill-fated emigrant train lasted two days; at the end of which time the defenders were treacherously induced to give up their arms, and then they were brutally murdered, men, women and children, except the very youngest, who were preserved to make saints of.

A terrific boiler explosion took place in a foundry in Cincinnati, yesterday, by which three persons were killed and nine others injured. The boiler was a new one, and was being tested with but sixty pounds of steam on. The fault probably lies in the employment of a defective gauge, which, by misleading as to the amount or pressure allowed of the steam got too high.

Forrester, who was arrested in Washington a few days since, and taken to New York, has been identified as one of three men who were seen near the house of Mr. Nathan on the night of his murder. A convict in the Connecticut State prison is to be brought on to testify against him, who, it is stated, was cognizant of the murder, if he was not a participant therein.

THE PEACH CROP.—Few persons who do not regularly visit the steamboat wharves can have any idea of the immense quantities of peaches produced in this State for market. For several weeks past some six or eight steamboats have been constantly engaged in running them from the Eastern Shore and in the heart of the season the average daily receipts were not less than twenty-five thousand boxes. The greater portion of these go direct to the packing houses, and comparatively few are offered for sale in the retail markets. While so many are brought to this city probably quite as many are sent from the peach-growing counties of the Eastern Shore to the more Northern cities. And besides those brought from the east side of the Chesapeake to Baltimore Anne Arundel county produces large quantities from the lands bordering on the Patuxent and Severn rivers and from the lighter lands near the Patuxent and its tributaries, while the regions of West, South and Rhode rivers are greatly enlarging the cultivation of that fruit. The peaches brought to this city during this season give employment to fully ten thousand persons, principally females in the various departments of the packing business. The business has grown to immense proportions and is increasing with each succeeding year but the supply of fruit appears to be always equal to the demand, as the peach culture area is always extending, the farmers finding it a more profitable crop than cereals or esculents.—Baltimore Gazette.

LARGE EXCHANGE OF PROPERTY.—We learn from the Fredericksburg Herald that Mr. P. Nolan, of New York, who a few months ago exchanged city property with L. C. Frost, Esq., for a farm here, has expressed his further appreciation of Virginia property by an exchange of more New York property for two large farms in the vicinity of Ashland, putting the city property at some $45,000. Since then he has been in Fredericksburg, and exchanged New York city property valued at $4,500 for a small farm belonging to Mr. Winans, adjoining the Frost farm. We hear that he made a big banner for the fine landed estate of J. L. Stansbury, Esq., offering that gentleman property in New York, estimated by him at $40,000, for Mr. Stansbury's farm, including all the implements, stock, &c. Mr. Nolan says that New Yorkers are of the opinion that Virginia property has touched bottom, and that this is a good time for them to invest, especially in well located farms.

VIRGINIA NEWS.

A tragedy occurred at Freeport, in Gloucester county, on the 1st day of August last, resulting in the death of Isaac J. Duer, formerly of New Jersey, at the hands of George A. Tinsley, formerly of Hanover county. The parties were all of the highest position in their county, and the killing was the result of a story circulated by Duer involving the disgrace of Miss Marcilla Spindle, a daughter of Dr. Philip Spindle, in her relations with Tinsley. On the opening of the trial at Gloucester Court House on Monday last there was a very large crowd. Very able counsel are engaged, among them ex-Gov. Wise and ex-Lieut. Governor Robt. L. Montague for the defense, and the Commonwealth's Attorney is aided by Raleigh T. Daniel, of Richmond.

The Page Courier says: "Dr. Wm. F. Broadus has spent several days recently in our town, during which he preached several fine sermons in the Baptist church. Dr. Broadus was baptized here, and here preached his first sermon at least half a century ago. Though feeble in body, his mind retains the vigor of youth, and possessing a very practical mind, his sermons are rich in undying thought. The Baptist church during the meeting secured the services of Rev. J. N. May as Pastor."

At the session of the Dover Baptist Association, in Richmond on Thursday night, one of the officers of the Sunday School Board stated that there are 500 white Sunday Schools in Virginia, with 12,000 officers and teachers and 30,000 scholars. ## Immigration—The Northern Neck.

In July last a number of leading citizens of the lower Northern Neck counties of Westmoreland, Richmond, Lancaster, and Northumberland, organized an "Agricultural and Immigrant Society," with a view of testing what could be done by combined energy and influence to stimulate the influx of capital and population to that section. A letter from the President of the Society, Col. John M. Brockenbrough, of Richmond county, to a friend in this city, gives an interesting and very hopeful account of its plans and operations.—Richmond Whig.

He says:—"Populating our rural districts to the extent of territorial capacity seems the only path to progress and development, and presents the sole chance of substantial relief to our impoverished people. Our Legislature having failed to interest themselves in this direction, nothing can be done save through local organization."

"We sincerely hope that the prospects are encouraging for increasing the population of this section in the only way in which it is possible to affect the current of immigration now flowing to the Northwestern States. The immense exertions made to populate the new States, the extraordinary encouragements and flattering inducements held out to settlers, the co-operation of State authorities, railroad corporations, agents, speculators, and others, combine to fix an irresistible infatuation upon our Western frontiers, and the delusive cry of Westward, ho, carries every emigrant who lands upon our shores to that imaginary El Dorado. We have, therefore, been compelled to start where Northern immigration schemes end. We have gone to the far West, invited gentlemen of intelligence, capital, position, and influence to visit this section of our State and compare its advantages with those offered by the West. The inducements and attractions of the country have given them entire satisfaction. We have made large and important purchases, and we have now every assurance that the same good character and substance from the States of Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota will move down with their families in October next. Thus prominent and intelligent gentlemen, after many years' residence in the West, give up every tie and association there formed, in order to avail themselves of the superior advantages of this section. These constitute an influential nucleus, around which we confidently hope, in a few years, to gather an energetic and thrifty population of skilled farmers, mechanics and laborers fully adequate to our territorial wants."

MAKING TRADE.—When a man establishes a business, he necessarily must depend largely on total strangers for patronage: for however large his previous acquaintance, it cannot be sufficient to ensure an amount of business to satisfy his wants. Now there is a marked difference in business firms, the same as in individuals, as the facility of acquiring friends, (and keeping them, too.) Let us see if we can discern the secret which makes men successful in this particular. It cannot be altogether in this superiority in the amount of their merchandise, for we have often seen two concerns equally well situated, as to location, and it was not, perhaps the one with the fullest stock that could show the largest amount of sales and profits. Something there is in certain men calculated to attract or repel in their daily contact with their fellows, and we venture to assert that when a man in a degree possessing this sort of magnetism which enabled him to out-strip others in a race for business prosperity, its primary cause can be found in either natural or acquired kindness and disposition to accommodate and please, coupled with habitual dignity and adherence to principles of integrity.
